CITY TO PROVIDE NEW RESERVOIR

At a special meeting of the City Council held last Monday evening, resolutions were adopted calling for bids for the furnishing of materials and for pouring of concrete and for the concrete lining of the new municipal reservoir.

The new reservoir, which is located on the highest point in Daly City, is necessary for additional storage of water to the extent of a million gallons, and to provide proper pressure for adequate fire protection for the upper end of the Crocker Tract and West End section.

According to the notice inviting bids, sealed bids will be received at the office of the city clerk up until 8 o'clock P. M. on the 13th day of October.

This will be an additional improvement that should be of great benefit to the residents of Daly City.

EAGLE HORSESHOE TOSSERS VICTORS

The Daly City Eagles horseshoe team hung up another victory last Sunday morning at the Daly City Park, defeating the World war veterans in the finals.

The Vets nosed out Steve Pfeifer and Mike Reardon by a score of 19-18. Reardon said he had a sore neck or somethin', as Andy would say, but did not say whether he had it before or after the game.

In tht finals, H. H. Smith and Julius Nelson won both games, by the scores of 34-27 and 31-14. This undoubtedly proved that these boys can toss the old horse slippers, and how.

Barnyard golf is getting them all on their toes, as two more teams have entered the field. The Knights of Columbus have a promising array of players and will be on hand next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock to lock horns with the Eagles. The Native Sons are also getting together a horseshoe team, and will soon take on all comers.

HIGH SCHOOL P. T. A. HOLDS RECEPTION

On Tuesday evening, September 15, the Jefferson High P. T. A. held a very interesting meeting in the school auditorium, with President Mrs. McIsaac presiding. It was the reception to the teachers and Freshman parents, a yearly event. There was quite a large crowd and at the close of the meeting a very fine program was presented in charge of the program chairman, Mr. Saiz, which consisted of two beautiful solos by Mrs. Pauw, accompanied on the piano by her son Roelof; two solos by Miss Burfield, accompanied by Miss Hanson; and last but not least a one act playlet written and directed by Roelof Pauw. Roelof is one of our talented students and some day his friends expect to see his name in bright lights.

At the close of the program all descended to the Senior room, which had been beautifully decorated by the committee, and where refreshments were served. Mr. Ferguson acted as toastmaster. Very interesting talks were given by Mrs. J. R. Spaan, president of the Seventeenth District P. T. A., Mrs. Burkel, Mrs. Franzen, Mrs. Dowdell, president of Bay Shore P. T. A., of Visitacion Valley, Mr. Bentley, president of the board of trustees, Mrs. Jensen, secretary of the board of trustees, and Mrs. McIsaac, who expressed her appreciation for the large attendance and invited all who were not members to join the Association. The evening closed with the singing of the P. T. A. song. The next regular meeting will be held on October 20, and all parents of the high school students are invited to attend.

STORK SHOWER

Last Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Gus Ford, of Parkview avenue, gave a stork shower in their home in honor of Mrs. J. Ferro. The home was artistically decorated, the color scheme being carried out in pink and blue. The table was prettily decorated, at each place being a favor in the shape of a baby carriage of pink and baby bunting bootees in blue crepe paper. Many lovely gifts were received by the honored guest. After the many gifts were viewed by all, the remainder of the evening was spent in a brisk game of cards. Delicious refreshments were enjoyed by the following: Mr. and Mrs. Russell McGrath, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Moran, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. SCOUTS DISCUSS TRANSFER PLAN

The District Council, Boy Scouts, of Daly City, held a special meeting last Tuesday night in the Council Chambers at the City Hall.

Mr. Johnston gave the members a resume of his meeting with Raymond O. Hanson, the chief of San Francisco. Mr. January stated that the entertainment was all set and it would be some show. Chester Smith reported that the boys were very eager to sell more tickets.

There followed a lengthy discussion of whether Daly City would remain in San Mateo Council or petition for membership in San Francisco Council. It was stated that it would cost Daly City about five times more to stay in San Mateo Council. This means that if we didn't withdraw, we would have to give up our Scout activities in Daly City, as we would not pay our heavy quota to San Mateo Council. By joining San Francisco, we will be recognized by the National Council and will have a court of honor and board of examiners. We would also haev our own Commisisoner. Mr. have our own Commissioner. Mr. office. Further details of this matter will be published at a later date.

The Boy Scouts and the Cubs wish to thank the many generous people of Daly City for their support in the ticket sale. Have you a sticker for your window? We would like to see every window contain one, so won't you help us? Just remember this is for your boy, and we know you would like your boy to have the same as the others do.

We hope to see the entire population of Daly City at our entertainment and dance. C. S.

HORSES TRAINING FOR FALL MEETING

Horses are galloping at Tanforan. The first of the shipments for the Fall Meeting at the popular course arrived early in the week. Trainers lost no time in getting their runners out on the oval to test their speed.

Stuart Polk, conditioner of many high class thoroughbreds and known from one end of the country to the other as a developer of rising talent, had the distinction of unloading the first carload for the big session. His string came from San Diego.

Tonto Rock, winner of the San Mateo Handicap last Fall at Tanforan has had a long rest at Imperial Beach and indications are he will be at the height of his form when the bugle calls the horses to the post on the first day of the coming period of racing, Friday, November the sixth.

The San Mateo was at the gruelling distance of one mile and one furlong last year and in winning it Tonto Rock proved himself to be a real stayer. At the approaching session it is expected the son of Trap Rock will be made eligible to the stakes at one mile and a sixteenth and also for the California Handicap, which is at one mile and a furlong.

In increasing the number of stakes, the Pacific Coast Breeders Association has changed the San Mateo from a gallop of nine furlongs for all ages to a race for two year olds at six furlongs.

Fred Almy, stakes winner on important courses, was in the Polk consignment, as was La Balotte, Backbone and half a dozen other fast ones.

Next week the first of the Eastern contingent may be expected. Trainer H. W. (Frisco) Hoag of the John W. Marchbank establishment, trainer Al Jones of the Bill Boo Stable and others are planning to leave Chicago prior to the wind-up of Lincoln Fields. Some fleet ones are coming in those strings. De Swasey, Satin Spur, Givanna, Chazzan, Sun's Son and runners of that calibre promise to make things hum at Tanforan.

Following the wind-up at Del Monte in the early part of October, Elmer O'Connell will ship the Agua Caliente Summer Derby winner Foolhardy and others to Tanforan. The well known breeder has asked for fifteen stalls. His horses are at Del Monte at present.

J. H. Edwards, who led the winning owner's list at Agua Caliente in the summer, has sent in a request for fifteen stalls at Tanforan. His gallopers are at Fairmount Park, with the exception of a few turned out at San Ysidro.

Tracey Reno, who seems to be a real comer among the jockeys, will be at Tanforan. He is with J. H. Edwards.

WILL USE JAIL FOR OFFICES

Adopting the recommendation of the grand jury, the San Mateo county board of supervisors plans to remodel the old county jail at Broadway and Maple streets, Redwood City, to house five of the offices crowded out of the county court house. The work will cost $1,446.

FIREMEN ENJOY BANQUET-DANCE

Last Saturday night the members of Station No. 1, First Aid, Daly City Fire Department, all in their new uniforms, enjoyed a banquet and dinner dance given by Mrs. P. Dormoy, assisted by an able committee, in the Veteran Firemen's Hall. The affair was of a three-fold character: Men's night at that Company, also Captain Dormoy's birthday, and the twenty-seventh wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. P. Dormoy, of Mission Circle.

Besides chicken and all the good things that go with it, the guests also enjoyed delicious venison. Captain Dormoy was the lucky hunter who brought down the buck on his recent hunting trip on the Hutsell ranch in Mendocino county.

The Veterans' hall and the banquet room were made very homelike with a dim light effect secured from an assortment of foor lamps placed about the hall. Beautiful palms and ferns and lovely flowers added to the decorations.

A grand march was led by Chief J. J. Kennedy and his wife at 9 o'clock from the Veterans' hall upstairs to the beautiful banquet hall below. Lieutenant Wood and Mrs. Wood were toastmasters for the evening. Mrs. Dormoy was chairman of the arrangements and was ably assisted by Mrs. W. Harmon, Mrs. M. Goldberg and Mrs. K. Peterson.

Two fancy cakes were part of the table decoration. They were sent as a surprise gift to Mr. and Mrs. Dormoy. One had birthday greetings, and the other wedding anniversary greeting, and were presentd by Langendorf Baking Co.

During the course of the dinner short talks and words of greeting and congratulation were given by the following members of the department: Chief J. J. Kennedy, Assistant Chief F. Hansen, Assistant Chief A. Chesney, Captain P. Dormoy, Commissioner G. Schenk, and A. Bodien, chairman of the fire committee and City Councilman.

After the banquet dancing was enjoyed, the music being furnished by Messrs. C. Porter and A. Harmon.

At 1:30 A. M. coffee and cake was enjoyed by the guests, who departed at 2 A. M. with the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" echoing in their ears.

Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. M. Goldberg, Mr. and Mrs. W. Sunderland, Mr. and Mrs. A. Tennler, Mr. and Mrs. J. Reardon, G. McLeod, City Councilman A. Bodien, Mr. and Mrs. K. Peterson.

Later in the evening, a committee of men from San Francisco Post No. 58 served the many guests a delightful repast. In appreciation of their efforts, all the Posts represented at the gathering donated very liberally that Post No. 58, to whom the credit is due, may be helped to carry on the work.

Peters and Pauls church, where a requiem high mass is celebrated out in the open. These annual parades are beautiful, with all their different floats, drill teams and drum corps, and it gives the home folks a chance to see their different favorite teams participate.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The Jefferson Union high school night school classes in Auto Mechanics, English for Foreign Residents, Bookkeeping and Typewriting are filling up and soon the limit of registration will be rached. There have been requests for instruction in additional classes such as Stenography and Art, and as soon as the required number enroll these classes will begin. Anyone desiring to enter such classes should call up the high school during the day and leave his name, stating the class he wishes to enter. Sessions are from seven to nine P. M. each Tuesday and Thursday. The school is free to all adults in the district.

The discussion which has taken place among the students during the past two weeks concerning school dances has resulted in the drawing up of a plan by the students themselves whereby such functions will be managed through the co-operation of students with the faculty. This plan will be presented to the Board of Education for its consideration at the next regular meeting of the board.

Last week one of the student body officers yielded to the lure of the golf course, and "cut" his classes. Upon returning to school he found that his "holiday" cost him his office in the student body.

It is understood that "cutting" of classes or other violations of law governing the school will automatically remove any student body officer from his office in Jefferson.

Holding an office in Jefferson Union high school carries not only an honor but a responsibility—a responsibility to observe the rules of the school and maintain a creditable standing in scholarship. This is also required of all athletes who represent the school in competition with other schools.

Last Friday Jefferson's football team won from South City by a score of 13 to 6. The game was hard and clean and reflected credit upon the students and coaches of both schools. Before the game a case of overenthusiasm was discovered in time to be checked. Four Jefferson men went over to South City and painted the goal posts and side walks purple and gold—the colors of Jefferson. Principal James Ferguson called a student body meeting and pointed out that this was not good sportsmanship. Coach Biaggini also expressed his disappointment. At the close of the meeting the men who did the painting frankly confessed their mistake and went over to South City with Principal Ferguson and Coach Biaggini and offered apologies to the Principal and faculty and student body. This straigtened out the difficulty. So that there will be no misunderstanding in future, it was mutually agreed between the principals and coaches of the two schools that in future any act of vandalism on the part of the students of either school will automatically cancel the game scheduled to be played. This was done to emphasize the fact that the rivalry between South City high school and Jefferson is in the field of sports, and that the rivalry, while keen, is friendly.

LOCAL FEDERATED WOMEN'S CLUB CONVENES

After a vacation of three months the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Home Club of Colma and vicinity met at their club house in Daly City last Tuesday afternoon. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Lillian Landini, Mrs. W. H. Clay presided.

Refreshments were served. The club is planning a tea and card party at the home of the president, Mrs. Lillian Landini, at 408 Winchester street, Daly City, on October 13, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon. Members and their guests are cordially invited.

The money will be distributed as follows; high schools, $21,600; elementary, $237,057.54, and Junior college, $71,800.

HORSEMEN PREPARING FOR TANFORAN MEET

Horsemen of the east and of the West are sending in nominations for the rich stakes to be run at the coming Tanforan meeting. Interest is so high in the features the management is confident many of tthe best gallopers in training will be seen under colors. Six stakes of the aggregate added value of $35,000 are down for decision.

In accordance with the settled policy of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association, nominations will close for the various fixtures during the meet. Late closing helps materially in bringing out topnotch performers of all ages.

Dates for the stakes are as follows:

Saturday, November 7th, San Bruno Handicap for two year olds and upward, not less than $5,000 added. Six furlongs.

Saturday, November 14th, Pacific Breeders Association Handicap, for two year olds foaled west of the Continental Divide, property of members of the Breeders Association at the time of closing, not less than $5,000 added, six furlongs.

Saturday, November 21st, San Francisco Handicap, for two year olds and upward, not less than $10,000 added, one mile and a sixteenth.

Thursday, November 26th, Thanksgiving Handicap, for two year olds and upward, not less than $5,000 added, one mile and a sixteenth.

Saturday, November 28th, San Mateo Handicap, for two year olds, not less than $5,000 added, six furlongs.

Saturday, December 5th, California Handicap, for two year olds and upward, one mile and one furlong.

On opening day, Friday, November 6th, Armistice Day, Wednesday, November 11th, and on other afternoons in the session valuable handicaps will be given. No handicap will have added money of less than $1,200.

Joseph A. Murphy, director of racing at Tanforan, finds conditions extremely encouraging for a successful period of sport. On a recent visit in New York he received numerous inquiries as to the season here and probably quite a number of stakes nominations will be made by metropolitan trainers. Judge Murphy is at present in Chicago.

American children have on deposit more than $52,000,000 in school savings banks throughout the United States.

JAIL SITE REQUEST DENIED BY COUNTY SUPERVISORS

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday definitely and finally refused to grant the city of San Francisco, a jail site on the Sneath ranch west of the Sklyine boulevard. Opposition to the granting of the permit was headed by Supervisor Manuel Francis, after Joseph Phillips, the city's right-of-way expert, had appealed for favorable action.

The supervisors also laid over until October 5 a petition from Millbrae, asking for a special election on the incorporation of Millbrae Highlands and Millbrae Villa. Another petition opposing the move was also fled.

FIFTH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

The table was beautifully decorated, the color scheme having been carried out in pink and green. In the center of the table was a large basket of red roses, with ferns. At each place at the table pastel shaded electric lights were placed beside each place card. A large fancy decorated birthday cake with the proper number of candles was in a very prominent place.

The guests spent a very pleasant afternoon playing indoor games for which lovely awards were made to the winners. The guests were: Jacqueline Howard, Helen Campbell, Jacqueline Lecari, Patsy Morgan, Alicia Fields, Robert Crooker, Frank and James Rossi, Edward Gladnor, Henry Nelson, Walter Warner, Harold Fields.

BELMONT COUNCIL TO GRANT PERMIT FOR DOG RACING

Following a canvass of the votes cast in the "authorization" election which made possible dog racing in Belmont, the Belmont City Council last Monday went on record as giving assurance to the promoters of the project that permission to operate in that city would be given as soon as legally possible. L. A. Barrett, member of the city planning commission, and active in the fight against granting permission for the races, tendered his resignation and it was accepted by the Council. At least 125 men will be employed to construct the track, it is said.

ANDREW MARECK ARRAIGNED IN S. F. ON MURDER CHARGE

Charged with murder in connection with the death of Mrs. Anita B. Lund, Andrew J. Mareck was arraigned in court in San Francisco last Wednesday. Preliminary examination was set for September 30.

Mario Muratore, sweetheart of the woman whose body was found on the highway near Rockaway Beach, San Mateo county, was also charged with murder. Muratore has been held by police since the body was identified as that of Mrs. Lund.

"ON THE SPOT" SCHEDULED FOR THE CURRAN THEATRE

When Messrs. Belasco and Curran offer Edgar Wallace's famous stage hit, "On the Spot," at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, on Monday evening, September 28, for an engagement of two weeks only, with practically the entire original New York cast, headed by Crane Wilbur, Anna May Wong, and Glenda Farrell, San Francisco theatre-goer, will see what is declared to be the original racketeer drama. Wallace, prolific and popular writer of detective and crook stories, introduced "On the Spot" in London, where it enjoyed a run of a year and half. Last season its highly thrilling and humorius episodes captivated New York audiences for 35 weeks.

Rather than a mechanized and plotted affair, the play is said to be a swift series of intensely absorbing episodes heavily sprinkled with laughs —because of the author's satirically humorous treatment of the subject. It is woven around the king of the Chicago underworld. This personage lives in a highly ornate apartment, filled with rare oriental rugs, stained glass cathedral windows and priceless antiques, while his lieutenants ride through the night with machine guns, putting double-crossing gangsters on the spot. Here this criminal overlord kills men, steals women, bribes the police and rules a whole city. The career of this ruler of gangdom is reported to be vividly and authentically depicted, culminating in an ingenious and startling denouement. William Keighley, who has been directing a series of noteworthy productions for Belasco and Caurran, has staged "On the Spot."

Added interest is attached to the engagement because of the presence in the cast of Miss Anna May Wong, famous Chinese actress, just back from a series of European triumphs, who is well known in San Francisco.

TWO KILLED, FOUR INJURED IN AUTOMOBILE COLLISION

Two persons met death and four others are suffering from serious injuries as a result of a head-on collision Sunday night on the Bayshore highway near Armour avenue, South San Francisco. THE SAN MATEO COUNTY FALL FLOWER FESTIVAL

Flower lovers from all over the state will visit San Mateo during the three days from October 23 to 25, when the San Mateo County Fall Flower Festival will be in progress at the Junior College. The queenly chrysanthemum, in all its hues and varieties, will be the center of attraction. San Mateo county, the center of floriculture in the West, will exhibit a wonderful and colorful arrangement of Fall blossoms, including dahlias, gladioli, roses, carnations, tuberous begonias, coleous, hydrangeas, anemones, autumn foliage, and decorative berries.

Fruits and vegetables, russet apples and golden pumpkins, figs, persimmons, grapes and pomegranates, and the lowly onion, cauliflower and carrot will also be attractively arrayed, and will carry out the general autumn color scheme.

A floral parade and pageant, participated in by the school children of the county, will take place on Saturday afternoon, October 24, according to Dave McCullough, chairman of the parade.

Martin A. Poss, of San Mateo, manager of the show, has announced that there will be a number of awards, including money, trophies and ribbons.

If anyone thinks the high cost of living hasn't come down, let him scan this advertisement by a restaurant in Birmingham, Ala.: "Half fried spring chicken with rice and gravy, 15c."

Complaining that they have been unable to sleep, neighbors of Mrs. W. M. Riggs of Moundsville, W. Va., have asked that she stop her frogs from croaking at night.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Richmond banks, which now remain open until 1 o'clock on Saturday afternoons, will close at noon, effective on October 3, according to announcement.

Work has started on razing the abandoned Southern Pacific roundhouse which was built at San Fernando more than fifty years ago. It has been long a landmark in that part of San Fernando Valley.

San Jose's first census was taken 100 years ago by the Mexican government, fifteen years before the American occupation. At that time there 166 men, 145 women, 103 boys and 110 girls in San Jose, a total of 524.

The Richmond City Council has awarded a contract for paving Fourteenth street and Hall avenue in the inner harbor district to the Independent Construction Company of Oakland for $63,944.70.

Frank Cuffe, San Rafael contractor, has been awarded the $249,000 contract to construct a ten-mile road in San Jacinto National Park. He is to establish headquarters at Indio, Riverside County, at the request of the government bureau of public roads.

More than 30,000 boxes of Pacific Coast pears were shipped from San Francisco to Europe during the last week of August, according to Department of Commerce reports. The steamer Pacific Exporter carried 20,420 boxes, the Heranger 8940 and the Drechtdyk 2731.

Burglars led the list of offenses reported to the State Bureau of Criminal Identification for the first eight months of 1931. Second degree burglaries totaled 15,876. The total of 25,654 offenses were reported to the bureau for the fore part of the year with 3447 offenses during the month of August alone.

The new connection of the Ukiah Tahoe highway from Williams westward is being graveled and oiled for the entire distance, according to the Touring Bureau of the California State Automobile Association. The work will require about 90 days to complete and during this period traffic will be delayed for short intervals.

At a county wide meeting at Kentfield to dedicate that portion of the Sir Francis Drake highway from Fairfax to Greenbrae, speakers urged that the towns of Corte Madera, Kentfield, Ross, San Anselmo, San Rafael and Fairfax be united into one great Marin city. Details will be arranged at a mass meeting later.

Assurance that motoring time between Martinez and Oakland will be cut 15 minutes next spring was given when Supervisor Harry Stow directed County Engineer R. R. Arnold to prepare plans and specifications for widening, straightening and paving three miles of the Lafayette "short cut" highway from Martinez. The route cuts 2.6 miles from the distance between Martinez and Oakland over that of the Walnut Creek or Pinole routes.

Albacore fishing may be revived as a sport on the Pacific coast as a result of the venture of Hikokuma Shiraishi of Washington, D. C. Shiraishi, as part of a $3,000,000 project, is now reconditioning the old Mexican steamer Chihuahua and converting the ship into a combination fisherman, freezer and carrier. With a 600-ton capacity the ship will roam the South Pacific in quest of the elusive albacore, a species of tuna.

As a means of facilitating entry of the Great Northern Railway into California, the state department of public works signed an agreement with the Great Northern and Western Pacific whereby both lines may construct their joint tracks at grade across the Alturas-Redding lateral, on the state highway system. The agreement also provides that when traffic conditions warrant, the railroads must contribute 75 per cent of the cost of grade separations and an overhead crossing.

Southern Alameda county's fall peas are being directed eastward at the rate of two carloads daily, and that average will be continued until the first frosts, according to an official of a sales' company, Alameda and Santa Clara Counties have more than 2,500 acres planted in the fall crop. Desirable prices exist and the demand for the product is sufficiently strong to indicate disposal of the entire yield, it was stated. The summer pea production and sale was satisfactory, about one hundred carloads leaving the Hayward depot for Eastern and Mid-Western points.

Federal Road Bureau officials in San Francisco signed a contract with the Yglesias Brothers, San Diego contractors, for construction of 10.26 miles of the Pines-to-Palms highway, scenic road down the east slope of the San Jacinto and Santa Rosa Mountain, for a total cost of $240,916. Work is expected to begin at once on the project which is expected to be completed by next summer. Its completion will open high-gear travel from Hemet over the mile-high mountain range to the Coachella Valley, a route expected to be a famous scenic winter drive.

Miss Lillian Vogelman of Oakland, daughter of Dr. D. J. Vogelman of Vallejo, has been appointed by the Board of Education as dental hygienist in the public schools of Vallejo.

Harry Horn has been elected to the presidency of the Anaheim Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association. This post carries with it responsibility of presenting the annual Halloween festival parade in that city, an event which last year lured 40,000 people.

The city of Colton will not be any bed of roses for hoboes or wanderers this winter as it has been in the past, according to the plans of the City Council. The Council has decided to clean out the "jungles" in the Santa Ana River bottoms south of the city and has started this work so that it will not provide a shelter for the men with their cans of mulligan stew.

A 40 cents reduction in the Modesto Irrigation District tax rate for the fiscal year 1931-32 appeared assured following the closing of assessment rolls by the directors after a series of meetings as a board of equalization. The new rate is expected to be set by the directors at $4.40 on the $100 of assessed valuation. Last year the rate was $4.80. Only a few years ago it was $6.40.

The California Raisin Pool has launched its threatened legal campaign against "bootlegging" of raisins by members when it filed Superior Court actions against growers in Fresno and Tulare counties. The suits, filed against J. P. D. Hofer of Dinuba and W. S. Lockie of Fowler district, ask damages for 205 tons of raisins contracted to the pool and allegedly sold to outside packers.

The annual harvest of grapes is under way in the Cucamonga-Ontario district. An army of pickers is stripping the vines of the blue grapes and loading them on cars for shipment to eastern markets. According to R. R. McKennett, deputy horticultural commissioner for the district, the pick will be extremely light this season. A total of thirty-six cars of grapes were loaded for the East, and last year at this time about eighty cars were loaded.

Selection of a site for the proposed $1,000,000 mental hospital in southern California is expected to be made at once, it was announced by Colonel Walter Garrison, director of public works. Six sites, culled from more than 150 offered in southern California counties, are now being investigated, and the final selection will be picked from these. The six properties now under final consideration are located within a short radius of Los Angeles, Colonel Garrison announced.

The Postal Department will issue a rectangular stamp in October to commemorate the surrender of the British forces at Yorktown 150 years ago, it was announced by Postmaster Harry L. Todd of San Francisco. The stamp will be in two colors, red border and black panel, and carry the pictures of George Washington, Rochambeau, French general, and De Grasse, French admiral, who bottled up Cornwallis, British commander, on the York river.

Improved conditions along the Pacific Coast in the lumber trade were verified in statistics showing that lumber shipments into San Francisco in August were 6,205,000 feet higher than in July. Coastwise shipping and railroad lines, as well as many local lumber concerns, and subsidiary industries, received the principal benefits of the increase. From California coast ports the lumber total during August was 11,400,000 feet, compared to 5,300,000 feet in July.

Work has started on the $217,000 Pacoima Wash project, according to County Supervisor Henry Wright, who was a visitor at San Fernando recently. The channel of the wash will be widened on the outskirts of San Fernando and a settling basin will be constructed on 167 acres near Arleta street. Levees will be constructed on each side of the wash and the project will give about 100 men work for a period of several months. The costs will be defrayed through a transfer of unexpected funds from the Pacoima Dam bond issue. All work will be done under the direction of the county flood control department.

Still dreaming of a veritable "bonanza strike," despite his 83 years, John J. Preston, picturesque survivor of early California days, laid his plans for another trek into the hills around Mariposa in search of gold. In the interim, Preston has been acting as curator of Mariposa's '49 Museum, "jes' restin'" until he starts out again. For most of his eighty-three years Preston has plodded over the mountain ranges and across the desert, occasionally hitting a "pay streak," but passing on in search of more fruiting fields. For Preston is still dissatisfied with just finding "pay dirt." He wants to make the "big strike." Then he'll be willing to quit, but not until then.

California's proposed $300,000,000 co-ordinated water conservation project has been put on the program of the annual conference of the Association of Western State Engineers, to convene at Sacramento in October. Representatives from all Western states, in addition to a federal delegation headed by Dr. Elwood Mead, U. S. commissioner of reclamation, will consider all engineering details of the project. Conflicts between the federal and state jurisdictions over the use of water, flood control and navigation was also listed for consideration

MEN ARE LIKE THE LEAVES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SOME leaves keep their green
Longer than the rest:
When the old trees lean
Farther from the west,
When the winds blow cold,
When the last leaves fall,
Some green leaf grows old
Latest of them all.

So it is with friends:
When the summer's done,
When the season ends,
Farther swings the sun,
Some friends will remain,
Keep their faith with you;
Poverty or pain,
They continue true.

Men are like the leaves,
Fairest in the spring;
When the autumn grieves,
That's another thing.
In the summer scene
Would that we could tell
Which would be the green
When the others fell.

SEASONABLE DISHES

WHEN preparing salad for more than the usual number, a few packages of lemon gelatin will make a fine foundation for the various fruits or vegetables. If one wishes, add in place of the water, to dissolve the gelatin, fruit juices, strained broths or both, made with bouillon cubes; they add flavor as well as nutriment.

When giving a luncheon or serving a church or society club, a molded gelatin salad is always well liked. It may be set in small molds, or in large flat dishes and cut in serving-sized cubes, or it may be lightly broken up with a fork and served in nests of lettuce.

Vegetable Salad.

Grate six or eight medium-sized carrots, or better, shred very fine on a vegetable shredder; add one finely minced onion and one green pepper also finely minced, a few stalks of tender celery chopped fine, a cupful or more of finely shredded cabbage and one small cucumber cut in dice. Add to three packages of lemon gelatin dissolved in three pints of hot liquid and put away to mold. Chill before adding the vegetable and let thicken slightly.

Hot Slaw.

Shred cabbage very fine and crisp in cold water. Beat the yolks of the eggs with two tablespoonfuls of cold water, add a tablespoonful of butter, salt to season and a quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Cook this dressing over hot water until thick. Pour over the drained cabbage and heat until thoroughly hot. Serve hot.

Spanish Pepper Salad.

Dissolve half a box of gelatin in a half-cupful of cold water and add a cupful of vinegar. Add half a cupful of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a teaspoonful of salt, with one cupful of boiling water. Mix with six canned pimientoes, two cupfuls of celery and one cupful of pecans, all cut fine. Mold in small molds and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

German Cabbage Salad.

This is one of the most appetizing of all cabbage salads. Chop a crisp hard head of cabbage with an onion or two, according to the size of the cabbage; three cupfuls of chopped cabbage will need one medium-sized onion. Cut up a two-inch cube of salt pork into the smallest possible cubes and fry until brown; pour this browned pork and fat over the cabbage, stirring and mixing well; add a teaspoonful or two of salt and in the same frying pan add enough vinegar to moisten the salad. When boiling hot, pour that over the cabbage. Serve after standing in a warm place to keep hot. This is very good when cold, so there is never any waste.

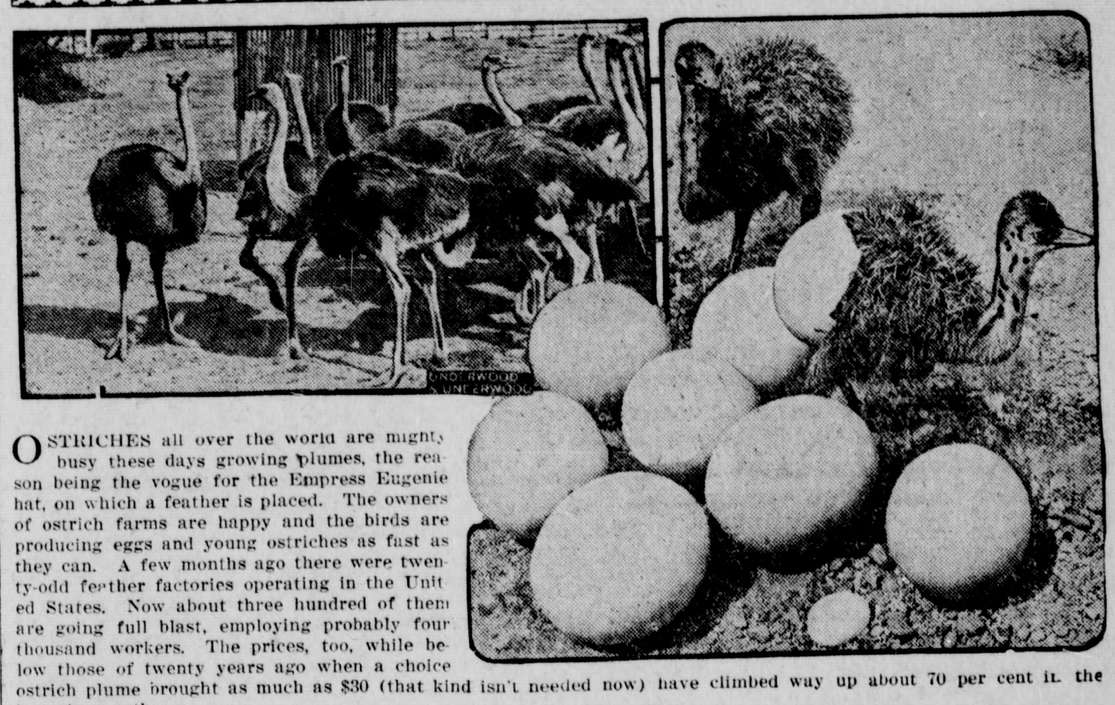
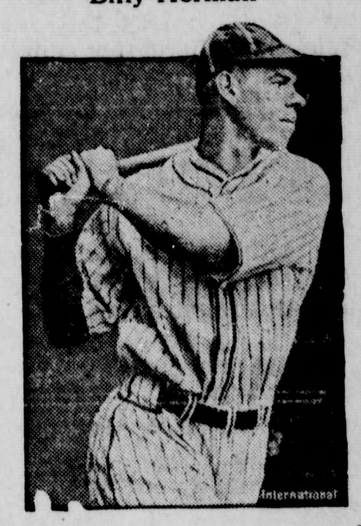
Ostriches Busy Supplying Demand for Plumes



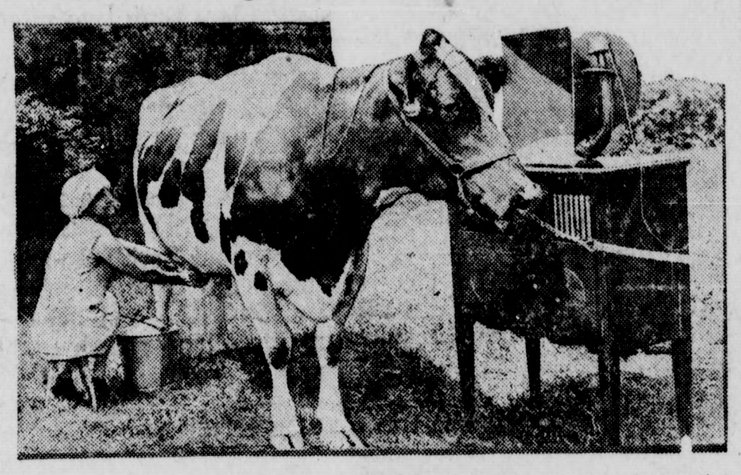
OSTRICHES all over the world are mighty busy these days growing plumes, the reason being the vogue for the Empress Eugenie hat, on which a feather is placed. The owners of ostrich farms are happy and the birds are producing eggs and young ostriches as fast as they can. A few months ago there were twenty-odd feather factories operating in the United States. Now about three hundred of them are going full blast, employing probably four thousand workers. The prices, too, while below those of twenty years ago when a choice ostrich plume brought as much as $30 (that kind isn't needed now) have climbed way up about 70 per cent in the last six months.

Billy Herman



Billy Herman, sensational second baseman of the Louisville Colonels, was purchased recently by Manager Hornsby for the Chicago Cubs, the price being rumored to be $50,000. He was to have reported at the end of the season, but Hornsby has called him in and put him at work on the second bag. Herman has been called the best man in the American association.

Music Brings More Milk From Cows



THAT cows will give more milk to the strains of music was proved when Ben Scott, in charge of the cattle at the Fredmar farms near Oakville, Mo., installed a radio loudspeaker for the benefit of the restless bovines. They immediately showed signs of musical appreciation and stood still while they were milked.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HONKER SENDS HIS THANKS TO PETER

THE slap of Paddy the Beaver's tail on the water, especially in the stillness of the night, is a very startling sound. It is no wonder that Honker the Goose awoke with a start. The other geese did the same thing. "Honk, honk!" said Honker in a low voice, which was the way of asking Paddy the Beaver what the trouble was.

"I don't know," replied Paddy, "but Peter Rabbit thumped his danger signal and I passed it along by slapping the water with my tail. It seemed to me that some of your followers were drifting pretty close to the shore and if there is any danger about, that is where it is, and there is danger or Peter Rabbit wouldn't have thumped."

Meanwhile the geese who had drifted so near shore were swimming out and all gathered around Honker in the middle of the pond to find out what the scare was, their long necks stretched as high as they could stretch them as they looked and listened suspiciously. Now Honker has the keenest of ears. You wouldn't think so to look at him, but he has. They caught the sound of the tiniest rustle on the shore. You or I wouldn't have heard it. Oh, my, no! But Honker did. It was the rustle made by Reddy Fox as he changed his position.

"There is some one over there," said Honker, in a low voice. "I thought you said that there would be no danger here tonight, Paddy."

"I didn't think there would be," replied Paddy. "It must be that some one saw you come here. Probably it is Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote. You wait and I'll find out."

Paddy dived and when he came up he put only his nose out of water. He was very close to the shore where Reddy and Granny Fox were hiding, and the minute he put his nose out of water he smelled them. Then he grinned to himself and dived again, coming to where Honker was waiting. "Reddy and Granny Fox," said he briefly. "They are hiding right over there on the edge of the shore and I guess that if you hadn't wakened you would have had one or two less to make the long journey South with you by this time. Two or three were pretty close to that very spot when I gave the alarm and were getting closer all the time."

All the geese began to gabble at once, thanking Paddy for having waked them in time. "Don't thank me," said Paddy. "It was Peter Rabbit who discovered the danger. I only passed his signal along. I didn't know where the danger was or what it was, when I slapped the water with my tail. But I did know that when Peter thumps the ground the way he did it is best for everybody to watch out, so I wakened you."

"Where is Peter?" asked Honker.

"I don't know," replied Paddy. "I heard him run away after he thumped. I guess he knew that it wasn't safe to stay another minute because Reddy and Granny Fox would be likely to try to catch him to make up for spoiling their chance to dine on a fat goose. There they are now!"

Sure enough, there were Reddy and Granny Fox in plain sight on the edge of the pond, looking over at Honker and his followers with hungry, longing eyes. You see, they knew that they had been found out and that it was of no use to hide there any longer, for having once been alarmed the geese would not again give them the least chance to catch them. Honker boldly swam toward them. Just out of reach he stopped and hissed angrily. Old Granny Fox drew back her lips and showed all her sharp teeth.

"Hiss away," she snarled. "If it hadn't been for that meddlesome Peter Rabbit some of you never would have hissed again." With that she and Reddy turned and disappeared in the Green Forest.

Honker swam back to where Paddy the Beaver was waiting. "Very early in the morning we will have to be on our way to the sunny southland," said he, "and so we are not likely to see Peter Rabbit again. The next time you see him please thank him for us and tell him that Honker the Goose never will forget what he has done for us this night. Will you?"

And Paddy promised that he would.

The Old Gardener Says:

IN MANY parts of the country the torch lily or red-hot poker, catalogued both as Tritoma and Kniphofia, can be wintered in the open ground with a light protection in the way of leaves or pine boughs. In New England and other northern states, however, it is very often killed, for which reason it is better to take up the plants when cold weather comes, storing them in boxes of dry sand or coal ashes in the cellar, or with a slight covering in a cold-frame or a pit. If this plan were generally adopted, these brilliant flowers would be seen much more often in northern gardens. They are to be prized for their habit of blooming in the autumn, although some of the newer kinds will flower almost continuously from midsummer.

PROBATION FOR RECKLESS DRIVERS

A probation system for supervision over drivers whose licenses are restored after having been revoked is now being established in Connecticut.

Under the proposed system, a personal guarantee will have to be given, before a license is returned, that the offender will not repeat his offense. Each individual case will be thoroughly considered and the license will only be returned when officials are satisfied that circumstances warrant it. The driver will then be followed up, and reported upon so that if he again manifests reckless or negligent tendencies his license may be again taken back.

It is said that the main flaw in the plan is the difficulty of enforcement. But the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles believes that it can be done satisfactorily.

He says: "The safety of the public demands that new and more seriously applied methods of direction be used, and more severe standards of fitness on the highways be adopted. Safety can only be attained through better selection, thereafter supplemented with a corresponding system whereby persons can be checked and whereby those persons who by dint of appearance, education or other means have succeeded in acquiring operator's license where there really exists some defects in temperament, physique or adaptability can be detected and removed."

Other states will watch the Connecticut experiment. And if it is successful, there will probably be strong public demand for it elsewhere.

An investigating committee declares there is "widespread corruption" in New York City. Those investigators are simply finding out everything.

Peace advocates will rejoice that there is a lull in the fighting in China. So will linotypers and proof-readers.

NO FINANCIAL PANIC

In spite of the general economic breakdown of the last two years, there has been no semblance of a financial panic, such as occurred in 1907 and in other years of depression, according to Rome C. Stephenson, president of the American Bankers' Association.

Formerly a marked recession of business resulted in money panics, suspension of specie payments and kindred disasters. None of these elements of a real financial panic has been seen during the present depression. The banking structure as a whole has not been shaken, in spite of many failures of small banks. At all times the banking and credit machinery has been able to extend support to business and manufacturing.

Mr. Stephenson declares that banking and corporate finance in this period of depression are unflinchingly taking their portions of short rations that the nation's need for readjustment demands. Interest rates, security yields and corporation dividends have all dropped to levels that constitute drastic reductions in the compensation of capital. The greatest problem today is unemployment, he says, adding that unemployment is the worst wage cut that the worker can suffer, and the worst cause of business stagnation. His conclusion is this:

"The sooner we can get our masses of workers back to work, the better it will be for both capital and labor."

ACTIVE AT 88 YEARS

Local newspapers and a wide circle of friends and neighbors recently congratulated Samuel B. Smith, of Titusville, Pennsylvania, on his eighty-eighth birthday, and many asked the inevitable question as to the secret of his long and active life.

The answer would indicate that his life has been long because it has been active. At any rate he still works ten or eleven hours a day in the acre garden adjoining his home. He eats only green vegetables from his own garden; does not eat sweets or desserts of any kind, and never used tea, coffee or other stimulants, except for a short time when he was in the army during the Civil war.

Mr. Smith takes considerable pride in the fact that he was one of those who 72 years ago this month drilled the famous Drake well, the first oil well drilled in any part of the world. The monument to this achievement, of which he is the sole survivor, stands less than two miles from his present home.

Around it eleven wells are actively contributing their quota of Pennsylvania grade crude oil, the product of the original well and still universally rated as the world's premier crude. In four states, Pennsylvania, New York, West Virginia and Ohio, this same crude is being steadily produced in large quantities from thousands of wells.

This pioneer achievement of Samuel Smith and his father pointed the way for the establishment of one of the world's greatest and most vital industries. He richly deserves the many messages of congratulation which came to him on his eighty-eighth birthday.

NEEDS OF RURAL SCHOOLS

In a recent report of his studies of rural schools and the children attending them, Prof. Thomas D. Wood of Columbia University paints a gloomy picture of the conditions surrounding the country child.

He declares that the average rural school house is the worst type of building that could be imagined and "less fit for its use than prisons, asylums, almshouses, stables, chicken houses and dog kennels are for their uses."

In other words, he makes the charges that better provision is made for criminals, paupers and animals than is made for the school children of the rural districts.

While this is a very strong statement, and may not hold true in the better communities, the fact remains that rural schools are not what they ought to be, and in many cases are a disgrace to a civilized nation.

Progress is being made in nearly all the backward states, but it is pitifully slow, as greater numbers of the children of those sections must be provided for each year, and school revenues must be continually increased to keep pace with this normal growth.

If conditions are one-half as bad as Prof. Wood declares them to be, parents should take a more serious interest in the situation and put forth still greater efforts to provide proper facilities for their children.

VALUE OF GOOD WILL

One of the striking developments of recent years in the business world is the increased value which individuals and corporations place upon the good will of the public they serve.

Good will is really only another name for confidence, for if a business concern has the confidence of the community it has its good will. It often takes years of fair dealing to build up the great asset of public confidence, yet it may be lost by a few shady transactions.

For this reason, everlasting vigilance is required on the part of owners of a business, to see that not only are their own principles and policies sound, but that the spirit of the establishment is carried out by every person connected with it, even to the lowest salaried employee.

The New York judge who declared that a man is master of his own home reflects little credit upon the wisdom of the judiciary.

One streak of silver lining to the depression cloud is seen in the fact that motorcycle production has fallen off about 50 per cent.

LAWS AND LAWYERS

Taken man for man, it is probable that the lawyers of the country illustrate as high a type of citizenship as can be found in the ranks of any other profession or calling. It is not, therefore, the purpose of this article to cast any reflections upon lawyers, collectively or individually, so far as their integrity is concerned.

It is nevertheless true, says a recent writer, that lawyers are in the main to blame for the multiplicity of laws with which this country is burdened today, as well as for the dilatory tactics exhibited by our courts of high and low degree.

Some time ago the Illinois Bar Association declared that "the subject of law reform is technical and lawyers must deal with it, yet they do nothing, or are hopelessly divided." No less an authority than Chief Justice Taft condemned our present system of criminal procedure. A similar expression was made in a resolution of the American Bar Association.

Congress and state legislatures are dominated by lawyers; all laws are framed by lawyers (many of them to be later declared unconstitutional by other lawyers acting in the capacity of judges); all court procedure is established by lawyers—yet the highest authorities among them admit that they have not made a shining success of it.

What is the remedy? We don't know. Ask a lawyer.

The most ambitious stenographer we know tried to get the job of taking dictation from Floyd Gibbons.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

That fame and fortune have come to the great advertisers. Their products have become a part of the life of the world.

Continuous advertising of quality has brought the good will which has made these concerns what they are today.

To be a success any business must have the good will of the people it serves. Good will is obtained by keeping customers satisfied.

It is a well know fact that continuous advertisers give full value for money spent and, by so doing, keep their customers satisfied.

Continuous advertising makes a strong appeal to the pocketbook; so strong that it creates the necessary desire to possess.

The selling of quality merchandise through the printed page means increased business, and increased business means increased profits.

Now is the time for the business concern that is not a regular advertiser to get busy.

People have been educated to read the advertisements before they buy, and then buy from the advertisers who offer them the best for their money.

So the love letters of the king of the Huns and Avars were deposited in the safes of the West Central branch of the National County bank. Harold breathed a blissful sigh of relief. That trouble was over, thank goodness.

Harold's lunch was eaten at his customary solitary table at the teashop. At the same table sat two neat and dapper young men, one of whom had a bad cold, but both of whom looked at him interestedly and keenly all through lunch. At another table sat a hawklike profile and a spectacled mustache. Harold found no prospect pleasing.

At occasional intervals during the day his conscience urged him into making feeble efforts to grapple with the deposit ledgers, and yet every time that he started entering up items and calculating interest he found that his thoughts were wandering, and more than once he perceived in a dim way that he was making mistakes, but he hardly bothered. In fact, by the time that five o'clock came the deposit ledgers were not merely two and one-half days behindhand, but they were even incorrect as far as they went.

Out went Harold. In a flash he had forgotten all about the king of Lesser Avaria and all his minions; he was going to buy flowers and he was going to take them to Marjorie. The prospect was delightful—he managed to prohibit his mind from dwelling on Mrs. Tilling, her opinion of him, and her encounter with him the night before.

The pavement was crowded with people hurrying home. At the side of the road stood a bright new saloon car; beside the car stood two bright young men, neat and dapper, with eager expressions on their faces.

"Hallo, old boy!" said one of them.

"Been waitin' hours for you," said the other.

Both speeches were made in clear, high-pitched voices, so that every one within twenty yards heard them. Then the two bright young men leaped one to each side of Harold. They clapped him on the back with a superfluous joviality which drove the breath from his body. They each seized an arm with a grasp which only Harold knew was like a grip of steel. At the same time the liveried chaffeur in the driver's seat reached back with his hand and swung open the door. The two bright young men heaved simultaneously and shot Harold into the car and followed him like a flash; the chauffeur put in his clutch, and the car moved off. Harold had been neatly kidnaped in full view of a city crowd. The whole process took four seconds, and not one of the witnesses had been sufficiently impressed by the sight to remember it five minutes after.

In the car Harold was wedged in the back seat between the bright young men. By some miracle of jugglery each of his wrists was handcuffed to the inside wrists of his fellow travelers. The young man who had said "Hallo" held in his left hand, away from Harold, a long, bright, unpleasant-looking dagger. This he flashed into view and then held again on his lap.

"This doesn't make any noise," he said cheerfully. "If you struggle or call out I'll put it through you. See what I mean?"

Harold saw clearly enough. He neither struggled nor shouted.

"But what in the world do you want?" he asked. That nightmare sensation was quite familiar to him now—the sensation of thinking clearly but helplessly in highly fantastic circumstances.

Both bright young men tittered politely.

"Does the name of his most august majesty, Raphael I, king of the Huns and Avars, convey anything to you?" asked the young man with the dagger.

"Yes," replied Harold. "Are you in his employ?"

"Have a heart, old man. We may have sunk low, but there are limits. I didn't say that, did I?"

"No," said Harold, and, accepting the hint in the young man's eyes, he said no more. Gazing out of the window, he saw that the car was hurrying westward. Harold peered cautiously out of the window, but the young man on his left made a restless movement and clearly held his dagger ready for all emergencies. The car proceeded into a litter of backwater-like streets of respectable houses. Finally it stopped in the quietest of all these streets, and the chauffeur blew a blast on his horn. The door of the tall house outside which they had stopped opened in answer.

"Look!" said the young man, pointing through the window with his dagger hand.

Harold leaned forward automatically, presenting the back of his head to the young man on his right, who had said nothing so far. That young man had a length of leaden bar covered with India rubber in the breast of his coat. He brought this out with unhurried haste, and with it he smote the back of Harold's head, reducing him with one deft blow to a state of flapping insensibility. While he flapped the two young men opened the door of the car and emerged with Harold still between them, their arms under his, the handcuffs unnoticeable, and dragged him rapidly up the steps into the house. The door closed behind them. The passage had taken less than four seconds, and no one had observed it.

* * * * * * * *

Harold awoke in the dark. His head was racked and torn by a splitting pain; his mouth was parched and fevered, and his limbs were twisted and knotted with cramp. He tried to put his hand to his head, and found it unaccountably prevented from moving. Restlessly he tried again, and a clink of metal and a tug at his other wrist informed him that his wrists were chained together. He was able to raise both hands at once to his head, where he localized the pain as being centered at the back an inch or two above his nape. He found there a big painful lump which he caressed tenderly, thereby starting a couple of sledge-hammers into action which thumped on the back of his eyeballs in a cascade of white fire.

He rolled over on to his other side. There was an unspeakibly foul taste in his mouth, and his tongue seemed made of sandpaper. The room he was in was in pitch darkness; he could see absolutely nothing. He tried to moisten his parched lips with his parched tongue, and then tried to call out, but it was only a feeble little noise which resulted. But Harold persevered, and his cries gradually grew louder.

Then at last he heard a noise as of a door being unlocked, and the light was switched on in the room, sending

(so Harold felt) a torrent of white-hot daggers into his aching eyes. He moaned and fell back.

The new comer was the bright young man with the dagger who had helped to kidnap him. He came forward toward Harold, and bent over him with surprising solicitude.

"As bad as all that?" he asked gently. "That fool Hawkins! I told him he hit too hard."

Harold's eyes could bear the light now, and he opened them and moaned again. He stared uncomprehendingly at the young man, and then allowed his gaze to wander round the room, taking in its singular bareness of all furniture save for the bedstead and mattress, innocent of bedclothes, on which he lay.

The young man made sympathetic clucking noises with his tongue as he bent over him.

"Feeling pretty dicky?" he said. "Never mind. It'll go off soon."

"Wanna drink," sighed Harold.

"Of course," said the young man. He tiptoed out of the room, and returned immediately with a jug of water and a glass. He poured out a glass of water and offered it to Harold, who took it in his feverish hands and drained it eagerly. The young man, took the glass back.

"Feeling better?" he asked, and Harold tried feebly to say yes.

Sunrise in the Himalayas

Tourists in India rarely omit a visit to Calcutta and when in Calcutta they rarely miss the opportunity of witnessing a sunrise in the Himalayas. From Calcutta you go to Darjeeling by train, which is a climb of many thousand feet. From this city in the clouds you ascend further about 1,500 feet to see the sunrise. The start is made at two o'clock in the morning and the 1,500 feet referred to is made by pony back or sedan chair. You arrive at the top before daybreak and you sit and watch for the break of dawn. You watch the sun come up over Everet, Kinchinganga and other white giants of the greatest mountain wall in the world. If the atmospherical conditions are favorable, you will see a marvelous play of color and after a cupful of coffee served on Tiger hill you silently descend wrapped in the mystery of the stupendous and unspeakable experience.

Life's Constant Movement

The news deals with the phenomena of event; fiction and drama play round the fringe of our moral system; but the broad undercurrent of life goes on unaffected by either.

Travel and Trade in Java

Java Youths Selling Bamboo Musical Instruments.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

INSTALLMENT buying has invaded Java, according to United States trade reports. The Javanese like American-made products. American exports to the island annually amount to more than $30,000,000.

Picturesque, horse-drawn carts with wheels from six to seven feet in diameter now must compete with speedier American-made auto trucks; and native two-wheeled passenger carts, once the only passenger vehicles in Java cities, are being crowded off the streets by shiny, new American-made pleasure cars.

The island, which is about the size and shape of Cuba, is traversed by a network of good roads and railroads. While traveling on either, the American tourist is seldom out of eyeshot of American products or products of American machinery. A traveler may engage an Italian, British, Spanish or French automobile for a tour, but a portion of the road he traverses is apt to be the product of American road-building machinery.

Should a blowout occur on the highway, it is likely that one of the thousands of American-made tires that are shipped to the island annually would be as readily available as one of foreign make. And the new tire may contain some of the rubber which a short time before flowed from one of the trees on a vast rubber plantation nearby.

The traveler who prefers to see the island from a train window is unaware that machinery and tools bearing familiar trade marks help to keep his train running on schedule.

Rice farmers whose watery farms rise like a series of silvery lakes up the sides of Java hills, cling to antiquated wood implements, but here and there the blades of plows and harrows from American factories and waterworks in agricultural regions reveal American-made machinery.

With more than 700 inhabitants to the square mile, the natives must be efficient farmers to feed the population. American fertilizer is the farmers' crop insurance, and when crops contract disease, American chemists furnish the medicine to bring them back to a healthful state.

Situated but a few hundred miles below the Equator, Java is hot, but the traveler often finds his hotel room made comfortable by an American electric fan. The power that runs the fan may come from one of the many electric generators imported from America.

Hotels Are Comfortable.

As a rule the hotels in Java are clean and well designed to meet the needs of a tropical climate. Usually, they consist of a main building openly constructed so that there is no hindrance to the slightest breeze. The service, complete in every detail, is enjoyed by foreigners. One takes his seat in a spacious pavilion and is brought soup by an army of beturbaned Malays. Then large, deep plates are brought, on each of which is a supply of rice, one of the favored foods of the island. On top of the rice, two inches deep, the diner is expected to place a variety of vegetables, curries, dried fish, eggs, fowls and meat flavored with peppery condiments. After eight of the dishes are deposited on the rice, the diner's appetite, if he is a novice, usually calls a halt and the remaining half of the sixteen varieties of rice "coverings" are allowed to pass untouched. No wonder the great majority of the resident Hollanders are inclined to corpulence when one takes a glance at the Java festive board.

The streets of the larger Java cities that are often filled with American automobiles and bicycles, have their oriental bazaars where a gay array of goods ranging from cheap trinkets to fine metalware and fabrics are on sale, but there are also modern shops in which American cement machinery had a constructional part. There, too, American-made flashlights, batteries, spark plugs, and other automobile accessories, are displayed under the rays of American-made electric light bulbs.

Sometimes the same ships that take American products to Java return with many native products which are popular in this country. Many head colds and cases of malaria are treated with quinine extracted from the bark of the Java cinchona trees. The rubber heels on one's shoes or the tires on one's automobile may contain Java rubber. Perhaps your morning coffee and your afternoon tea originated on a Java coffee or tea plantation, while there is a bare possibility that some of the small quantity of Java sugar imported by the United States may have been used to sweeten these beverages.

What Batavia Is Like.

Java ranks among the richest regions of the Dutch East Indies. There are more than 30,000,000 native inhabitants with a sprinkling of Europeans and Chinese and other Asiatics. This population requires systematic cultivation of the soil.

When the Dutch settled Batavia, the largest city on the island, they brought their love for the lowlands and built their city of European type, closed houses on canals which coursed a broad swampy area. But as trading men and soldiers died by the thousands from malaria and other diseases aggravated by the swamp vapors around them, the settlers eventually learned that tropical Java was not a temperate Netherlands.

European Batavia, now on higher ground, is a healthy city, a great emporium of trade and the metropolis of the island, sprawling over a wide area. The old town is almost entirely given over to the Javanese, Chinese, Indians, Arabs and Malays.

The new city has spacious parks, made colorful by myriad flowers and the luxuriant growth of the Tropics. Near one of the parks rises the imposing facade of the Museum of the Batavian Society of Arts and Sciences with a copper elephant, the gift of the king of Siam, in the foreground. The Batavia museum has one of the finest ethnological collections of any institution in the Far East and its publications rank well among the learned societies of Europe and America.

A sail of slightly more than 30 hours from Batavia brings the traveler to Soerabaya, the most important seaport in Java. Although the busy landing stage and bustling crowds in the streets impress the traveler of the city's commercial importance, it is for the most part hot and presents few attractions.

A few hours' ride from the city's back door, however, brings the traveler to Pasourouan where he may get the real flavor of Java's interior; where the dos-a-dos, Java's curious little high-wheeled covered wagons rumble over the roads behind sturdy white bullocks.

Tosari a Pleasant Resort.

Nearby, but reached only after hours of roughing, climbing on donkeys and afoot, is the delightful resort Tosari. A walk along the village's single street reveals the mode of life of Javanese mountaineers who are quite different from their neighbors in the lower valleys. Here are the homes of the Tenggerese, a hardy tribe which at the time of the Moslem invasion of Java retreated to the mountains and successfully defended themselves against the invaders. Tosari is perched on a flank of the Tengger massif 5,480 feet above sea level where invigorating air makes mountain climbing much more pleasant than in the torrid regions in the Javanese foothills.

Situated in the midst of the great East Indian volcano region, Java has its share of active and extinct craters. In fact the island is volcano-made. It is estimated that there are more than 100 craters on the island. Everywhere in Java, in the huge crater lakes, in fissures that now are river beds, even in ancient temples, half finished when interrupted by some fiery convulsion, are evidences of cataclysmic forces. The "treacherous Klot," as the natives call it, all but wiped out the town of Britar in 1919. More recently, Mount Merapi, situated at the extreme eastern tip of the island boiled over and took the lives of 90 natives.

A volcano is not always considered a calamity in Java. In fact most of the larger towns and cities of the island nestle around the base of active craters, although thousands of inhabitants have been lost in violent eruptions. Much of the prosperity of the island is due to the constant enriching of its soil by material coughed from these great smokestacks, and from the medicinal value of the hot mineral springs and highland resorts along the slopes.

PROTEGEE—VICTORY AND DEFEAT

That her genius was not only comparable but superior to the pretty singing talent of her niece Marcia was generally conceded by all who knew the rather unique situation of the young woman, Ula Lee, who at twenty was already so valiantly sacrificing herself in behalf of fostering the much slenderer talent of the fair young Marcia.

Ula was a singing teacher. At the death of her sister when her niece Marcia came to live with her, Ula's interests in her own career suddenly changed to interests focusing upon the younger girl. It was not so much with a consciousness of what she was sacrificing. It was probably a surge of something latent and maternal in Ula manifesting itself at the appearance of this orphan girl in her household.

Whatever secret ambitions and innate consciousness of her own vocal potentialities may have lurked within Ula, the coming of Marcia sidetracked them to such an extent that they seldom floated to the surface of her consciousness.

It is possible that this was made easier by the fact that Ula's future, for the past few years, had been excitingly bound up with that of a young architect who was just beginning to lay the firm foundations of a career that promised well. Felix Ermin and Ula Lee were ideally compatible. He loved her music and she in turn was filled with the conviction that a great career lay ahead for Felix in the fulfillment of his splendid art.

Those were happy days for the young pair, filled with struggle, it is true, but the kind of struggle made glamorous by the promise of tomorrow.

Then Marcia came. A dark, vigorous girl only four years younger than her aunt, but full of immaturities that made her charmingly the child. It was then that Ula's personal ambitions began to fade behind the dominant, effervescing personality that was Marcia. The girl had a voice, no doubt of that. Thinner, flutier than Ula's, with not so strong a middle register, but one of those pyrotechnical coloratura sopranos. With this voice, Ula worked for four years. As her own light began to recede, Marcia's came forward.

They were busy, formative years, making a veritable beehive of the little home which Ula shared with her niece.

But do not think that into any of these sacrificial days and nights, when there entered into the young aunt's zeal for the young niece self-denial that was unknown even to her intimates, self-pity or even self-realization dawned upon Ula.

She had long since begun to realize, taking stock of herself as a person, that the kind of success she most desired in life did not extend beyond the four walls she was to share with Felix Ermin. It was, perhaps, an embarrassing realization with which to be confronted. The world which Ula most desired was the homely one of Home.

There was a dream of a rambling frame house set in the center of a lawn which was to be the center of the paradise of earth, so far as she was concerned. It was not all sacrifice, then, to throw her heart and soul into Marcia's destiny. By instinct, by temperament and by personality, Marcia was the sort of person who belonged to the world. She was restless of restraint, covetous of adulation and glowing with the vitality of a potential personage.

It took the coming of Marcia to make Ula realize all this. No longer was she torn between her natural instinct for a home-life with Felix, and the career of a voice. Marcia had come to solve that most perplexing of problems. Marcia was Ula's proxy. In a way, it is understandable why Ula threw herself with such wholehearted zeal into preparing the younger girl to tread the ways her own feelings were so willingly, so gratefully foregoing.

When Marcia was twenty-one, she was ready for an audition before an opera committee. Her aunt's pride in her product was nothing short of obsession. There was no doubt that Ula had turned out an accomplished singer—one with high prospects.

The crushing defeat came to Ula with so little of the dramatic in it that she scarcely realized the blow until after it had been struck. It must have been in the way they did it. No shame, no hysteria, no fear.

Quite simply, Marcia and Felix came to Ula two weeks before Marcia was to appear in her audition before the opera committee and confessed their love. It was simple, honest and undemonstrative. Ula in turn, honest and undemonstrative, gave Felix his freedom and set about reconstructing an appalling world which had suddenly toppled into bits around her.

The incredible had happened. Happiness had slid from under her feet in a landslide. But life must be lived. Ula proposed to live it valiantly. Two weeks later, she appeared before the opera committee in place of Marcia, who was honeymooning n Havana.

There was never a time after that when Ula's success faltered. In two years, she was singing the most important soprano roles with the most important opera company in the world.

Inevitably, the pharaphernalia of grandeur wound itself around the simple person of Ula. She became a diva, a public figure and one of whom was expected the intricate and bedecked life.

Externally, aided and abetted by advisors, impressarios, agents and secretaries, she fulfilled these requirements, supplying the press with the necessary complicated detail of what was in reality her simple life, and appearing before the public with all the attendant glamour expected of one in her brilliant role of singing-bird of fine plumage.

Every spring, in the interval between the end of the arduous opera season and her sailing for Europe, Ula visits the Felix Ermins back in the town where a young singing teacher coached her niece toward fame.

The Felix Ermins live in a rambling frame house, set in a wide area of great lawn on one of the nice streets of the little town. Felix is a locally successful architect. There are three children. Marcia, who is a bit too plump, still is obstreperously young in her vivacity and filled with a dark glow that lends much to her personality.

To Ula, the rambling frame house, set in the center of the elaborate lawn, is the center of the paradise of the earth. Her visits there are as terrible to her as they are beautiful. Marcia, as she watches her, is the most-to-be-envied and the most-to-be-loved human being on earth.

And yet, there is no knowing Marcia. She reveals nothing by manner or word. Nor does Felix. Ostensibly they are a happy pair, rearing a happy family in the midst of stability, prosperity and well-being.

Sometimes of an evening during these brief annual visits of Ula to the home of the Felix Ermins, Marcia's slitted eyes, regarding Ula, are filled with pretty nearly every kind of defeat there is.

Reason Advanced for Use of "Oz." as Ounce

There is no "z" in "ounce" and therefore "oz." is a symbol rather than a true abbreviation or contraction of the word. Two theories have been advanced to account for the use of "z" instead of "s" in this symbol or abbreviation says the Pathfinder Magazine. The Oxford dictionary says that it is a Fifteenth century abbreviation of "onza," the Italian form of "ounce," and adds that "in manuscript forms of abbreviation the 'z' had the lengthened form, its tail being usually carried in a circle under, round, and over the 'o,' as to form the line of contraction over the word." The Italian abbreviation was retained in English, according to this theory, because it had become a sort of symbol like the modern $ and % signs.

Some authorities, however, are of the opinion that "z" got in "oz." in the same manner that it got in "viz.," the abbreviation of "zidelicet," a Latin word meaning to wit or namely and usually so read. Although the third letter "z," it is really the character used by early printers for the arbitrary mark of terminal contraction. During the Middle ages a character similar to "z" was used as the abbreviation of "et," meaning and. It was equivalent to the modern $. "Habet," for instance, was abbreviated "habz" by medieval writers. The early printers had no type for the symbol of terminal abbreviation and therefore used "z," the nearest thing to it in the printer's case. Thus "viz" originally represented a double abbreviation—"zi" for "vide" and "z" or "&" for "licet." "Ounce" was derived from French "ounce," which in turn was from Latin 'uncia," twelfth part.

Deers' Salt-Water Swim

Two lobster fishermen, trimming their catch in their motor dory, about two miles off the shore of Long Branch, N. J., were surprised to see two buck deer swimming in the ocean and headed for their boat. The men slipped lines over the heads of the exhausted deer and pulled them into the dory. When the boat reached shore the deer struggled to get out, and the fishermen had a rough-and-tumble time hog-tying them. The bucks were later released in the woods. It is believed that dogs had chased the deer into the ocean.

Perfume "Centers"

When Catherine de Medici went to France she was accompanied by a famous Florentine perfumer named Rene, and ever since that time the French have made great progress in the art. Certain districts in France are noted for certain perfumes. Cannes is noted for its perfumes of the rose, tuberose, cassia and jasmine; Nimes for thyme, rosemary and lavender, and Nice for the violet and mignonette. In fact, most of the flowers which form the basis of natural perfumes are grown in the vicinity of Grasse, Cannes and Nice.

Character in Smile

There is a very simple test by which it is said we can tell good people from bad. If a smile improves a man's face, he is a good man. If a smile disfigures his face, he is a bad man.—William Lyon Phelps.

MAN LOCATED THROUGH 68 CALLS TO 14 CITIES

In these days, when most out-of-town telephone calls, even those over vast distances, are put through while the subscriber holds the line, a call that required three days to complete seems incredible. However, such is the persistence of long distance operators that when an important call has to be put through and complete information about the location of the person desired is lacking, they "follow through" as long as there is any hope of completing the call.

Billy, the little son of Mrs. Herbert Brody of Knoxville, Tenn., was taken critically ill, and it became necessary to notify the child's grandfather, Bart Brody, a commercial traveler, who was known to be somewhere in Tennessee, Virginia or Kentucky—and that was about all that was known of his whereabouts. However, the task of locating him did not faze the operators in the Knoxville office, and for three days three operators worked on that call. They made sixty-eight different connections with fourteen different cities in the three states, accumlated twelve solid pages of report records and reported back to Mrs. Brody, the caller, fifty-two times.

Late on the third day Bart Brody was found in Jenkins, Ky., and within twelve hours he was back in Knoxville at the bedside of his grandson. Upon the return of the grandfather the boy began to show improvement and ultimately recovered.

Returns from a circular recently sent to wardens of the Division of Fish and Game show that quail are on the increase in California. Not so long ago it was defintely established that this excellent native bird was on the road to extermination. It was found that strict observation of the game laws and "artificial" propagation at the game farms alone could not save the quail from the same fate that removed the passenger pigeon from the face of the earth. Encroachments of an oncoming civilization made it imperative that some additional step be taken to save our state bird.

It was Captain Walter Welch, of the Division, who first suggested the idea of "checkerboarding" the state with a system of inviolate quail sanctuaries. He was very familiar with a private sanctuary that has been maintained in San Mateo county since the year 1901, and knew that his lone project had proven entirely successful. This sanctuary consists of 60 acres situated in a 610 acre tract.

At this time he announced that such a plan must be carried out entirely by volunteer methods. The Division can positively rule state owned property, but legal technicalities prevent the state from demanding refuges on privately owned land.

The Captain was placed in chage of an organization of volunteer deputies and work was started in earnest on the first of February, 1930. To date there are some 500 quail sanctuaries established throughout the state, and hundreds of birds are being guaranteed protection for a period of three years.

Careful study is made of property by the volunteer deputies before a section is recommended for the purpose. Permission is then secured from the owner, the land is posted, and suitable means are taken to feed, water and protect the birds from predatory enemies. It is estimated that a period of three years will be required to bring the quail population up to a safe margin.

Drought and forest fires have taken an enormous toll of wild life and fish throughout the United States, according to reports reaching the American Game Protective Association. The depletion of game and fish, it is believed, will be felt for years.

Birds and beasts, fish and fowl have suffered alike from both causes. The large number of forest fires destroyed countless numbers of wild fowl. And ashes and burned timber falling into lakes, streams and swamps formed a deadly kind of lye and poisoned fish life. The drought lowered water levels of streams and lakes, in many cases drying them up, leaving fish dead on the hard baked bottoms.

"The finny tribes have already been decimated and destroyed to a degree that is incalculable," an announcement of the United States Bureau of Fisheries at Washington declares. And the seekers of fish for sport and food will be ruefully aware of the losses for many seasons to come.

"All of the cold water game fish, such as trout, began to show signs of stress weeks ago," Mr. Lewis Radclyfee, deputy commissioner of the bureau, said. "As the temperature of their brooks and streams ran up, there were wholesale endeavors to rescue these fish and place them in streams where they might live.

"The actual dropping of water levels in lakes and rivers everywhere has played havoc with other fish tribes. Black bass, an essentially warm water fish, and many other species, died in water thought to be deprived by the excessive heat of its normal content of oxygen. Motor boats were kept going in many lakes throughout the country to keep the water stirred up, thus creating more oxygen."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

John L. Brady, publisher of the Blackfoot (Idaho) Daily Bulletin, says:

"A newspaper must not be restrained in the expression of opinion, but at the same time it must maintain friendly and loyal relations with its advertisers. Box offices must always have a large influence on newspapers. If a store is following unfair practices, a newspaper has no right to accept business from that store. A newspaper carrying such advertisements becomes a party to the unfairness, if it is informed.

"In a Chicago packing house there used to be a steer which was called Judas. It was the job of this steer to entice the cattle into the chute which led to the slaughter. A newspaper that is a party to unfair business methods is doing that very thing to the public.

"Untruthful advertising and short-cut methods have nearly disappeared, and the change is in a measure because the nwspapers have appreciated their responsibility. The awakened conscience we have heard so much about in business is due to the newspapers as much as to the advertisers.

"Newspapers are dependent upon their advertising largely for their support, but this support on the part of the advertisers is because the newspapers possess public confidence, and the things they print in every part of their paper carry an air of confidence and conviction.

"Today in these challenging times the newspapers are making a substantial contribution because they carry business messages which make people want to continue to carry on. If it were not for the messages carried to the people in every issue of the newspapers, it would mean there would be an actual buyers' strike instead of just conservative and sensible buying."

An enterprising statistician has figured out that it costs the average railway company $5,000 a year to blow locomotive whistles at crossings.

After reading about that test of radio-controlled destroyers, a lot of parents will be wanting to buy some of that equipment for their yougsters.—San Diego Union.

NIGHTHAWK AUTO TRIP PROVES HUGE SUCCESS

On Sunday, September 13, the Nighthawk Rod and Gun Club put on its annual Capitola motor trip. More than thirty persons participated in this event, and all the machines conveying the friends and members of the club were draped with streamers and plumes of orange and black, the club's colors, making this the most colorful Capitola trip in the organization's history.

From the starting point at Nineteenth avenue and Sloat Boulevard, the brilliant colored Nighthawk "Caravan" continued in procession along Sloat boulevard and on down the Skyline, passing en roupte beautiful Lake Merced, Crystal Springs, King's Mountain and Santa Cruz Big Trees. A panorama of coastline, valleys and mountains spread like a beautiful picture before the eyes of all the Nighthawk picnickers as the fleet of autos wended its way to Capitola, the destination of the trip. At the beach, the day was spent in swimming, boating, ball-playing, picture-taking and the playing of many beach games. Singing, to the accompaniment of ukeleles, was furnished by both members and outsiders. "My charge for drawing teeth is five dollars, but I'll take care of you for three dollars."

"Weel, could ye be aloosenin' it a wee bit for a quarter?"

"Don't let that poor boy be cut upon that log," howled the heroine.

"No. I never saw such people," returned the villain.

Customer: "Hey, waiter, were these catfish dead before they were cooked?"

Waiter: "Sure, I skinned them alive, and they died of embarrassment."

Investments of almost any sort can be swept away, but once a man get his home paid for he will have, at least, when hard luck comes, a shelter for his family and time to gather up his energies and wits toward making the best possible fight for the future.

They laughed when I sat down at the piano—for there wasn't any stool.
